Sidi Bou Said is a village located about twenty kilometers northeast of Tunis.

Perched on a cliff overlooking Carthage and the Gulf of Tunis, it bears the name of a saint: Sidi Bou Said El Beji. The international fame of the village was acquired in 1912 thanks to an English baron who built a sumptuous palace. Sidi Bou Saïd then became a place of rest and inspiration for many artists, musicians and writers such as Chateaubriand, Gustave Flaubert, Alphonse de Lamartine, André Gide, Colette, Simone de Beauvoir, etc.
